

Office of Financial Aid

Consent Form to Submit Changes

In accordance with the rules and regulations established by the U.S. Department of Education and written in the Application and Verification Guide, it is now policy that whenever the Office of Financial Aid has to update or make a correction to a student's FAFSA, we must have the student's (and parents of dependent students) signed permission. One of the most common changes this policy affects is in the process of updating a student's year in school, which can give the student more loan eligibility. We will not be able to increase loans until the year in school on the FAFSA reflects the year in school in our system. Therefore, by signing this document, the student (and dependent parent) will allow the Office of Financial Aid to make any necessary changes to the student's FAFSA.

Signing this form provides such consent, whenever necessary changes need to be made to benefit the student.
